“Climate change is at once a social and environmental justice issue, an ecological issue, and an issue of economic and political domination”

Global Justice Ecology Project
(www.globaljusticeecology.org/climate-justice/)

“Climate change is the global phenomenon of climate transformation characterized by the changes in the usual climate of the planet (regarding temperature, precipitations and wind) that are especially caused by human activities”

You Matter (www.youmatter.world/en)

“When we talk about climate change, we mean any long-term change in the average temperature, rainfall, wind conditions and numerous other climatic conditions. These changes may take place due to the dynamic processes of the earth (e.g. volcano eruptions or earthquakes) due to external forces (e.g. deforestation, tree burning, or the three types of pollution - land, air and sea), resulting in an ecological imbalance, the disappearance of certain animal and plant species, and the appearance of others.”
